Melissa Sears, Editorial Director of Journals, remarked, "It is an honor for our Frontline journals to be recognized by FOLIO: for editorial excellence in 3 health care verticals. Our teams are laser focused on serving health care professionals with content that impacts the way they provide patient care, and the recognition from the Eddie awards shows that we are delivering on that mission."

On the Folio: website it states, "The Folio: Eddie & Ozzie Awards is the most prestigious recognition program in the publishing community, recognizing excellence in editorial content and design across print and digital media. The Eddie & Ozzie Awards, are recognized industry-wide, receiving applications in the thousands in year from publications around the globe. Categories range in topics from articles, essays and full issue magazine, to blogs, podcasts and video content to cover design, graphic design, illustration, photography and more."

Content development, quality, and relevancy is of utmost importance at Frontline, with an emphasis on digital first. The many people who contribute to the editorial creation, digital and print design, multimedia innovation, and marketing research – working with authors, opinion leaders, and advisory boards – continually show professionalism and expertise as they strive to produce a depth and breadth of content that meets the evolving needs of our omnichannel readers. FMC is honored to have been recognized by FOLIO: magazine.
